DIVE SITE

Maratua is surrounded by a tropical atoll with a lagoon, and at the other end, there are steep cliffs and coral reefs. This massive U-shaped coral reef is covered with various types of corals, attracting a diverse array of marine life. Deep-sea and coral reef fish include hammerhead sharks, barracudas, triggerfish, dogtooth tuna, mackerels, bumphead parrotfish, tropical fish, double-headed sharks, nurse sharks, gray reef sharks, and whitetip reef sharks. Batfish can also be observed in this area. The major highlight is witnessing the world's largest aggregation of schooling scalloped hammerhead sharks at Big Fish Country!

Kakaban Island is also a significant sanctuary for stingless jellyfish. In an inland lake, just a short walk from the village, you can discover three different types of jellyfish: Aurelia aurita (moon jellyfish), Mastigias papua (spotted jellyfish), and Tripedalia cystophra (box jellyfish). Kakaban not only features the Jellyfish Lake, but also boasts undisturbed coral reefs and steep wall dives, increasing the likelihood of encounters with large marine life. Here, you can find large schools of barracuda and jackfish. There are also various types of sharks, ranging from whitetip sharks, blacktip sharks, and grey reef sharks to thresher sharks, leopard sharks

Sangalaki is Indonesia's most important green sea turtle nesting site. At night, mother turtles crawl onto the beaches, spend 3-4 hours digging nests, and lay their eggs. Every day, new hatchlings emerge from their shells. The surrounding dive sites are mostly known for being the best spots to observe manta rays.
